HS/US320 THE POLITICS OF MEMORY

IES Abroad Berlin

DESCRIPTION:

This course addresses the relationship between history, memory, identity, and trauma. Berlin's history has been shaped by conflicting ideologies, historical ruptures, and collective traumas. We will focus on how these events left traces in the urban geography. Discussions will revolve around the relationship between politics, memory, and identity by considering modes of commemoration and distinct instrumentalizations of commemorative forms in the divided city. While considering how memorials, exhibitions, art and architecture as well as mass media shape individual and collective memory, our approach will be comparative and interdisciplinary with an emphasis on relevant political and cultural events. How does the interplay between urban landscape, politics and memory create a sense of identity? How do we make sense of the multiplicity of meanings that resonate with hybrid memories in a city like Berlin where we encounter multiple Berlins and diverse stories of belonging? What is the relationship between narratives of memory and perceptions of the ongoing transformations of the city? How is the German historical legacy adopted by newcomers, migrants, and refugees? There will be regular course related field study trips, city walks and film screenings. The course will work with the following assumptions about memory politics:

- Memory is always selective. It reveals an interpretation rather than a mirror image of the past. National memory narratives promote an official version of events. They change in accordance with political and societal circumstances.
- Memories are symbolic representations of the past. They cannot recreate it, but only suggest what the past might have been, and what of it should or should not matter today.
- Memory is about identity and belonging. People's ability to remember always depends on socio-political and cultural circumstances. When individual memory disappears or must be suppressed for the sake of political norms, it gets replaced by an interpretation and (ab)use of that memory that claims to be objective.
- Memory is indeterminate and controversial. It can never be fully controlled by political elites. Nonetheless, governments shape the representation of what, when, and how people remember or forget the past by providing funds for official commemorative memorials and museums.
- Memory is about the interplay between remembering and forgetting. A city is composed of affective landscapes of intentional forgetting and painful remembering.

REQUIRED WORK AND FORM OF ASSESSMENT:

Final grades will be based on:

- Course participation and Homework - 10%
- Midterm (project outline) - 20 %
- Presentation - 20%
- Term Paper - 25%
- Final Exam - 25%

Course Participation

Course participation includes attendance, active participation in class discussions, familiarity with the assigned readings, and the topics covered in class. Students are expected to come prepared with personal notes, comments and questions on the readings. The IES rubric for participation is available on Moodle.

Term Paper

Students will work on an individual project, developed in consultation with the instructor on a topic of German/European memory politics, integrating aspects of the material we read for this course with a focus on Berlin. Final papers (approx. 1,500 words/ 5 pages) are due in the last session before finals. Papers can revolve on a special topic, exhibitions, films, memorial site in Berlin or other. These papers can also include interviews with locals, visual material, personal experiences while visiting the memorial space, etc.

Presentation

Students present at least one time during the semester on a topic related to the seminar topics (a list will be provided at the beginning of the semester. Please use power point or other appropriate format, interact/encourage class discussion, provide handout before presentation. (about 10 minutes)

Midterms

Students will prepare an outline (approx. 300 words) and bibliography for their term paper (due at the end of the midterm week). Outlines should include a clear description of topic; central questions; at least three relevant scholarly sources!

Final Exam

The final exam will be a written in class exam (90 minutes) responding to questions in essay format.

LEARNING OUTCOMES:

By the end of the course students will be able to:

- develop a critical understanding of concepts of identity and memory politics
- apply categories of political theory and cultural studies to German memory politics and history
- distinguish main concepts of historical thought relevant to memory politics (democratization and acceleration of history, individual vs. collective memory, the role of witness and historian, transformations of the ethics of memory)
- read historical sites as landscapes of memory and shifting identities
- develop key skills and abilities to deal with a multiplicity of meanings that resonate with historical landscapes and memories

ATTENDANCE:

Attendance and punctuality in all courses and field studies are mandatory. Absences can only be excused for valid reasons. Unexcused absences can affect students' grades. Students who miss 25% or more of all class sessions will fail the course. Missed exams cannot be taken at another time except in case of documented illness. Late submission of term papers and other work will result in grade reduction unless an extension due to illness or an emergency is approved. Please consult the IES Berlin Academics Manual on Moodle for additional details.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY:

Students are expected to abide by the IES Abroad Academic Integrity Code. Assigned papers need to be properly and amply footnoted where appropriate, with all sources attributed. Poorly written and grammatically sloppy papers will be judged more severely. Work with a language tutor.
