AN 364 THE MAKING OF PATAGONIA: AN INTERDISCIPLINARY APPROACH
IES Abroad Buenos Aires

DESCRIPTION:
This course explores the history and anthropology of Argentine Patagonia and its inhabitants, with a main focus on the relationships between indigenous peoples and territory over time. Course discussions and materials explore a wide range of topics: from European first-contact to current social, economic and environmental problems in the region involving indigenous peoples. Readings include contemporary anthropological and historical reports and current mainstream media, as well as self-representations by indigenous peoples today (in interviews, literature, films and newspaper articles). The course identifies the most persistent and dominant representations about Argentine Patagonia and its inhabitants over history, understanding the power relations involved in these constructions and their implications in the lives of indigenous peoples today. It includes a mid-semester field study trip to the southern city of Bariloche and its surroundings during which students will more deeply understand the realities of the region and develop first-hand experiences in relation to the various topics addressed in class, including indigenous peoples’ struggles in the region.

METHOD OF PRESENTATION:
The course begins with a general overview of the geography, economy and society of Patagonia. Following, we begin to discuss some of the main theoretical concepts that are central to readings, topics and discussions throughout the semester (i.e.: culture, identity, extinction, assimilation, invisibilization, territory, among others).

In relation to the course’s organizing theme -the relationship between indigenous peoples and territory in Patagonia between the 16th and 21st centuries- we next address topics such as: (a) the origin and effects of representations of the region and its people by 16th to 19th century chroniclers and scientists; (b) relationships between indigenous peoples of Patagonia and colonial and republican governments (18th and 19th centuries); (c) indigenous worldview and religion; (d) forced incorporation of indigenous people to the nation and land dispossession during the formation of the Argentine national state; (e) the persistence of 19th century dominant discourses regarding indigenous peoples and their effects in current politics and policies; (f) the recognition of indigenous rights and the rise of the indigenous movement in Argentina; (g) urban indigenous youth movement in Patagonia; (h) current territorial struggles of indigenous peoples today in the context of continuing “extractivist” economic policies.

REQUIRED WORK AND FORM OF ASSESSMENT:
- Classwork and Participation (15 points): Students are expected to be active readers of course materials and should come to class prepared to participate in discussions and articulate personal points of view related to course topics. In addition, students are expected to respond to reading guides and participate in online forums, as well as to do any in-class work or assignments.
- Assignments (35 points): In addition to active class participation, throughout the course students will engage in 4 assignments regarding course topics. Class assignments are: an initial conversation with a member of your host family or a local friend (5 pts.); a reaction to a film (5 pts.); a written and video account of the trip to Bariloche (20 pts.), and one presentation (5 pts.).
• Midterm exam (25 points): Taking into account the course’s specific bibliography, class discussions and assignments, students will respond to one in-class midterm exam. Students are expected to show understanding of the topics and problems discussed during class over the first half of the semester. Specific details regarding the exam will be given and discussed during class.

• Final Essay (25 points): The final integration essay will further explore one of the topics presented during the semester through a research question (2500 words). Students will present a 3-page rough draft of the final 10 days before the due date. Specific guidelines for the final will be given and discussed during class.

• Late assignments or exams will not be accepted unless previously authorized and for valid reasons only (i.e. medically certified illness). Students are required to review their writings with an IES Spanish professor during tutorial hours and have the professor sign the draft as proof of meeting this requirement. Students in this course will be expected to comply with IES’s Policies on Academic Integrity.

LEARNING OUTCOMES:
By the end of the course students will be able to:

- Relate their own experience in the US to their experience in Argentina, and particularly in Patagonia, regarding the materials and key concepts discussed in class.
- Comprehend and describe the main historical processes and forces explaining the invisibilization and marginalization of indigenous peoples of Patagonia.
- Critically analyze the difficulties involved in contemporary indigenous struggles, including the contradictions between an assertion of indigenous rights and various limitations to the exercise of those rights in Argentina.
- Understand and discuss the politics involved in contemporary narratives about indigenous peoples (including narratives about their extinction or assimilation, cultural change explained as loss of identity and/or culture, etc.).
- Understand the current social, political and economic forces shaping indigenous territorial struggles in Argentine 21st century.

ATTENDANCE POLICY:
Students are expected to attend all classes, unless they are ill. Check for attendance policy guidelines in the IES Student Guidebook. Absent students are responsible for acquiring relevant class notes and handouts from fellow students. Work assigned in a student’s absence will not be given a later deadline for them without prior agreement from the instructor.

Attendance and punctuality are mandatory. Each instructor will record each student’s attendance through Moodle. If student misses a class session or activity due to illness, she must provide the copy of a medical certificate from a medical professional to the instructor and give the original copy to the Academic Coordinator. Without this certificate, the absence cannot be excused.

Instructors have authority to mark students as absent if they arrive 15 minutes or more after the course starting time.

- Courses taught one day per week allow a maximum of 1 absence.
- Courses taught two days per week allow a maximum of 2 absences.
- Courses taught three and four days per week allow a maximum of 3 absences.

Every unexcused absence after the maximum allowance will lower the student’s final grade half a point (for instance, from “A” to “A-”, from “A-” to “B+” and so on). It is the students’ responsibility to stay up to date on their absence total.

Academic integrity
Students are responsible for familiarizing themselves with IES policy of academic integrity and for adhering to it. Academic dishonesty, including plagiarism, will result in course failure.
